Community Health Baby Clothing Bins

SNHS works towards keeping all children warm this winter

Chilliwack, British Columbia — Stó:lō Nation Health Service's Community Health team has created Baby Clothing bins in order to keep Stó:lō children warm this winter. These bins are open to anyone who needs clothes for their young children. Families may also drop off old clothing no longer needed.

Currently, bins have clothes ranging in size from 0-3 months to 2 years old. If you are interested in picking up clothes for your children, or donating gently used items, please feel free to contact anyone from the Community Health team at 1-877-411-3200 to have access to the clothing.

All clothing pick-ups will be treated confidentially.
