We successfully completed the final deliverable of the 08/09 BCCI proposal on April 16 and 17 with the Law-Making Processes workshop.

The workshop focused on looking at the world views, Stó:lō teachings and land stewardship. We were fortunate to have Wenona Victor of Skowkale lead the workshop through working with the Native Education Centre. By having Wenona, we were able to be true to our words, as she was not an outsider giving her views but rather someone who knows and understands the true meaning of being Stó:lō.

The premise of the two day workshop was to provide participants with an understanding of the process of law-making while taking Stó:lō laws into consideration:

- X'ólhmet te mekw'stám it kwelát - 'We have to look after everything that belongs to us';
- Xaxastexw te mekw'stám - 'Respect all things';
- Xólhmet et mekw'stám s'i:west e selsila:lh chet - 'Take care of everything our great grandparents taught / showed us';
- Haql'es chexw xwelmi:ay staxwelh - 'Remember future generations'; and

Ewe chexw qelqelit te mekw'stám loy qw' esli hokwex yexw lamexw ku:t - 'Don't waste / ruin, destroy everything, just take what you need'.

Over the two days there was a lot of good discussion which one could use to reflect upon and interpret in their Land Codes. For me, it was another step of my own personal journey; identifying who I really am and what really matters to me.

I think understanding the Stó:lō principles (laws) are a key element in the creation of our own laws if we want to be successful in a contemporary society.

First Nations Environmental Assessment Technical Working Group (FNEATWG)

On March 4 & 5, 2009, the Lands Department participated in the 4th Annual EA (Environmental Assessment) Best Practices Forum, held in Richmond, BC. The main topics of discussion were Linear Developments – Powerlines, Railways, Pipelines & Roads and Traditional Knowledge/Use Studies – Meaningful & Consistent Inclusion in EA. The workshop was thoroughly laid-out and presented in a inter-active manner. The movement created an opportunity for all the participants to get involved while sharing their experiences and networking amongst other First Nations, government agencies and consultants.

The workshop hit on all key areas from all aspects, the consultant conducting an EA, the developer, the First Nation and the Provincial and Federal Governments role/jurisdiction. After the presentations, the floor was opened up to a panel discussion about linear development impacts, benefits, mitigation and communications.

As more and more First Nations move into administering their land code, it is a priority to build capacity in Environmental Assessments, to ensure First Nations land is well taken care of.

Electoral Officer Training

On March 16 & 17, Sara Malloway and Jennifer Tommy attended the Electoral Officer training at INAC. The two day training session, was to update Electoral Officers on the Gull Bay decision (August 20, 2007). The Court ruled that subsection 75(1) of the Indian Act, which requires candidates for the position of councilor in band council elections to reside on-reserve.

As Lands Officers, we have held polling stations/referendums/ratifications for Additions-to-Reserves, 99 year lease developments, Land Code Ratifications and Designations. With our experience, we have been a part of Custom Elections; operating under a First Nation's Election Code vs. Indian Act. When this training came up, we decided it would be best to have formal training, to learn additional tips/tricks and build capacity on Indian Act Elections.

Our goal continues to be, delivering exceptional service, while staying current with changes in legislation and evolving with your First Nation's needs.

If you have any questions about the training, please feel free to contact us at 604-824-2451.

09/10 BC Capacity Initiative

Late last year Valerie Sam submitted an application to the BC Capacity Initiative for a phase two to the 08/09 funded proposal entitled, Transitional Training. The purpose of the this current years proposal is to provide a continued training plan for those First Nations entering into the First Nation Land Management Initiative and for those currently working under the First Nation Land Management Act.

Phase two consisted of preparing a work plan, a detailed budget breakdown, an education, training and skills development plan and confirmed partnership arrangements.

First Nations Alliance 4 Land Management (FNA4LM) – Conflict / Dispute Resolution Workshop

On March 18 and 19, immediately following our two day electoral officer training at Indian and Northern Affairs Canada, Jennifer and I attended a First Nations Alliance 4 Land Management hosted workshop. The focus of the workshop was on conflict / dispute resolution and negotiation skills.

tive and useful materials.

Over the two days we were given a number of principles to consider when approaching negotiations. Always do your homework; determine needs versus wants; be assertive; be creative; learn to understand others; learn to build trust; ensure your team works well together and find someone (your negotiator) who represents your organization's style.

resolve your conflict. There are a number of such as: informal decision, where you maintain more control, to adjudication, where there is less control and tends to become costly.

There are so many things to consider when approaching the negotiating table that I never would have thought about. I found this workshop to be a very interesting topic that beyond doubt needs more than the two days we had. I would recommend that everyone take a similar course as the skills can assist in anything we need to do in our everyday lives.

To our benefit, Dale Zaiser, an instructor at the Justice Institute of BC, facilitated the condensed two-day course. Because the Justice Institute of BC is the province's leading centre for conflict resolution skills we came back with some informa-

Another important issue to consider is the method of dispute resolution you plan to use to
